

Masako "Missie" Kajimura, An Apt Student Of English Language, Enjoying Visit

Miss Masako Kajimura is pretty, petite and a Japanese exchange student at Gettysburg High School. An animated conversationalist, "Missie," as she is known to her fellow students, seemed at home surrounded by the shelves of books in the high school library she visits frequently to improve her already excellent English. She expressed a fondness for "A Tale of Two Cities," a masterpiece by Charles Dickens.

"I hope to utilize my knowledge of English in secretarial work or as a translator of English literature into Japanese or Japanese literature into English," she said with enthusiasm. Noting the difficulty of being admitted to a Japanese university—"only one in twelve are accepted"—she said that if she was successful in completing college she might turn to teaching the English language in Japan.

In event of inclement weather Monday night the Muster Day will be held in the National Guard Armory at 9 o'clock Monday night.

Members of the first company, which received federal recognition April 30, 1947, were Capt. Robert L. Scott, 1st Lieut. John W. Deardorff Jr. and William G. Weaver. S/Sgt. Samuel T. Kessel, John D. Your reporter recently conferred with Dr. Harry F. Baughman, president of the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary, on the contemplated merger of seminaries. He had recently returned from a meeting in Chicago of the subcommittee on theological education. This is the unit of the joint commission on Lutheran Unity which is setting up a constitution for the proposed merger of Lutheran groups: United Lutheran Church, Augustana Lutheran Church, United Evangelical Lutheran Church and the Suomi Synod. The commission is also receiving reports from seminary presidents relative to a proposed merger of seminaries, especially the local school and Mt. Airy Seminary.

Dr. Baughman said the committee had not reached the stage where it could even suggest a possible merger, that it was receiving reports from the various seminaries and that further studies would require considerably more time.

The local theologian cited the advantages and disadvantages of mergers. He pointed out among other things the tremendous expense involved in founding a new seminary in a new location, the loss that would accrue to the local institution should it be forced to or decided to merge with another school and transfer its holdings.

Dr. Baughman said his mind is "wide open" as to what is best to do for theological education in the church. He

U. S. TO SPEND $2 MILLION ON PROJECTS HERE

The Department of Interior plans to spend $2,070,240 here in "Mission 66" projects, according to its report presented to the House Committee on Appropriations.

The report does not detail the exact amounts to be expected for each battlefield project but the sum includes the new Cyclorama and Visitors Center now under construction and the rebuilding of the various avenues of the battlefield.

The same report shows $180,182 is allocated in the Interior Department budget for operation and maintenance of the local battlefield during the coming year.

According to the department's report presented to Congress, the 25-cent fee charged at the Cyclorama during the summer months brought in $7,822.50. The department's report showed fees charged in National Parks nationally brought $4,741,157.74 into the department. At Gettysburg where the only charge is the admission fee of 25 cents to the Cyclorama, the income was low in comparison to the fees collected at many other national parks. At Yellowstone the fees brought in $951,766.57.

The Park Service presented the figures for attendance and anticipated attendance. Gettysburg, according to the report, had 870,800 visitors last year. The Park Service anticipates visitation during the current year will total 929,600, according to its report to the committee.

Fight Losing Battle To Open 'Pike In High Winds

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Weary highway crews ran into new difficulty today trying to open the snow-battered Pennsylvania Turnpike.

A Turnpike Commission spokesman at Harrisburg said the situation had become worse overnight as 60 mile-an-hour winds piled snow drifts 12 to 13 feet high behind crews trying to open clogged areas on the toll road's western end.

"We've got every piece of equipment available in action but right now it seems to be a losing battle," the spokesman said. He added it was impossible to say when the road could be opened to allow stranded travelers to proceed to their destinations.

Can't Reach Goal
Turnpike crews had hoped to open the troubled 175-mile stretch from Irwin to Carlisle during the morning but new snow and the wind-whipped drifts made this impossible.

Instead, the spokesman said an additional 10 miles of the turnpike between Carlisle and the Gettysburg interchange was closed "because motels in the Carlisle area were unable to handle the number of travelers."

The commission said additional snow reported falling on the road's northeast extension to Scranton could give us even more trouble." That area got some 15 inches of snow in the storm that hit Thursday night.

By early yesterday morning so many buses, trucks and cars were stalled on the turnpike's western end that nothing could move—not even the snow removal equipment.

Drivers who tried to get out of the area on other roads found their paths blocked by snow. Motorists quickly filled the motels along the toll road. Others not as lucky jammed into the turnpike restaurants. They were stranded there.

"Some people are asleep at the counters," said Doris Gunger, 28, a waitress at the Somerset turnpike restaurant. "Others are huddled on the floor. And some are just standing around talking. They're all pretty patient."

3,000 In Bedford
An estimated 3,000 persons jammed into the small community of Bedford, and a state of emergency was declared. Hundreds were given beds and food at churches. Others slept on the floor at a turnpike restaurant. And the restaurants along the pike were running low on food.

A family headed from California to Virginia ran out of money. They were taken in as guests by a hotel in Confluence. Sixty-five persons filled 40 rooms at a Somerset hotel; many were truck drivers who doubled up.

The state moved equipment into the stricken area from other parts of the state.

"Our main concern was to get the people off the road," said a Turnpike Commission spokesman. "We wanted to make sure they were taken care of. Nobody is stranded on the road. All are in service areas or motels."

Five Allies Unable To Agree On New Arms Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — the talks on disarmament policy was completed Friday by the men who will do the actual negotiating with delegations from five Soviet bloc countries at the Geneva conference. Three of these top men, Jules Moch of France, David Ormsby Gore of Britain and Gaetano Martino of Italy left Friday night for their home capitals.

The top five including Frederick M. Eaton of the United States and Gen. E. L. M. Burns of Canada, expect to meet again, probably in Paris, in early March.

Talks Are Secret
The talks here have been secret and the nature of the differences—apart from Allied disappointment with an apparent lack of U.S. leadership—has not been disclosed.

However, the impression among reasonably well-informed diplomats is that France is sticking to its line of wanting to concentrate on control of delivery systems for nuclear weapons and that the British generally favor a bold and more hopeful approach than some of the other allies.

So far the discussions appear to have been guided chiefly by a well-developed British plan.

Municipal Authority Has Paid Off $489,000 In Bonds In Its First Decade

Gettysburg's Municipal Authority has paid off $489,000 of the $1,541,000 worth of bonds it has sold during its ten years of operation, according to a report marking the beginning of 11th year of operation of the water system and sewer system by the authority.

It still has to pay off $1,052,000 worth of bonds during the forthcoming years, but its financial report shows it now in possession of a plant worth $1,355,833.03 of which $923,375.02 represents new construction and additions since the water works was purchased a decade ago, and the sewer system secured eight years ago.

Reports prepared in connection with the completion of its tenth year show the authority spent $431,508 to purchase the water system. During the last decade there have been additions costing $372,888.53 made to the water system and at the present time construction work costing $2,645.55 is underway thus making the total value of the water plant, property and equipment $808,022.08.

1959 Income $149,588
The sewer system cost the authority nothing at its acquisition. It was owned by the borough and turned over at no cost to the authority. Since that time improvements costing $537,763.60 have been made and at the present time construction work costing $10,097.34 is being completed, plus bringing the total value of the sewer plant, property and equipment to $547,860.94.

Last year's income of the authority from sewer-water bills was $149,588.07, of which $92,205 represented water sales and $57,383.07 sewer charges. Operation and maintenance costs totaled $69,454 of which $34,511 was allocated for the water system and $34,943 for the sewer system.

The report showed undistributed earnings of $45,190.02, of which $21,166.81 was attributed to the water system and $23,024.21 sewer.

"Applied Earnings"
The sewer department report shows $90,329.90 set aside as applied earnings: $41,750 for retirement of bonds, $20,000 reserve fund for debt service, $5,000 as a maintenance reserve fund, $3,831.63 as a fund for capital additions and bond redemption and $19,748.17 earnings appropriated for plant additions.

Applied earnings listed in the water account shows $72,098.87 for retirement of bonds, $25,600 as a reserve fund for debt service, $4,000 in the maintenance reserve fund, $4,446.22 in the capital additions and bond redemption fund and $87,836.52 in the fund for additions to plant, property and equipment.

A total of $106,127.43 is listed as "deferred credits." That amount includes $54,324.21 in customer advances for construction in the water department and $40,484.84 customer advances for construction in the sewer department plus $11,318.38 listed as "state contribution in suspense."

Help From State
The report of the auditor shows that the local municipal authority has received $24,699.11 over the years from the state toward construction expenditures. It also shows that the $11,318.38 listed as "state contributions in suspense" represents "funds received from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania under Act 330. No decision has been made by the board of directors as to the application of these funds."

The report of the engineering firm of Gannett Fleming Corddry and Carpenter Inc., shows that during the last year the operating revenues in the water department amounted to $91,959.07 or $5,739.07 more than the budget had estimated, and $5,102.67 more than the revenues of the previous year. Operating expenses of $34,511.61 were under the budget by $2,888.39 and under the operating expenses of the prior year by $796.93.

Operating expenses in the sewer department were $4,043.11 over the budget estimate of $30,900 and were $5,286.10 more than the previous year's expenses of $29,657.01. The abnormal increase in operating expenses was attributed to major maintenance on equipment and structures at the disposal plant. A total of $1,459.44 was spent on additions to the sewer property including 300 feet of 15-inch pipe placed on York St., purchase of an adding machine and office table and a manhole and valve box locator.

Work in progress at the end of the report included installation of 600 feet of terra cotta pipe on Sunset Ave. and installation of .000 feet of 15-inch and 1,000 feet of eight-inch pipe and a lift station in Straban Twp. Cost of the two projects is listed as $10,000.

Work Resumed On Sewer Line

In the sewer department the report showed operating revenues of $57,512.07 were $3,652.07 more than the budget estimate of $53,860 and $3,461.85 more than the operating revenues of the prior fiscal year.

Operating expenses in the sewer department were $4,043.11 over the budget estimate of $30,900 and were $5,286.10 more than the previous year's expenses of $29,657.01. The abnormal increase in operating expenses was attributed to major maintenance on equipment and structures at the disposal plant. # THOR-AGENA MISSILE IS DESTROYED

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Despite another failure, the Air Force will resume its Discoverer satellite series aimed at teaching man how to enter and return from space.

A 78-foot Discoverer X missile veered off course Friday after launching and headed for nearby seacoast cities. The Air Force destroyed the towering Thor-Agena missile at 20,000 feet, 56 seconds after launching.

A terrific blast rocked this missile base when a big orange fire ball swelled in the sky. A mushroom of black smoke billowed out, the fiery fragments as the sky rained missile's shrapnel in the size of automobiles.

Most of the fragments fell in the sea. Despite the deadly shower, there were no injuries or property damage. Cause of the malfunction was not immediately determined.

The missile was another failure in the Air Force's attempt to put a satellite into orbit, then recover its space capsule. Six Discoverers have achieved orbit so far but no capsule has been retrieved.

In Washington the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said an attempt to loft a 90-pound probe to intersect the orbit of the planet Venus will be made sometime during March. Another major space probe attempt is planned later this summer, probably in August.

Young Brehm, police said, was struck by a car operated by Orin A. Fair, 31, Gardners R. 2. Fair's car attempted to pass a parked vehicle on N. Pitt St. and Brehm's bicycle was traveling in the opposite direction when the two collided. The youth was thrown off the bike into the gutter and the bike was demolished. He was removed to the Carlisle Hospital in the community ambulance where it was learned he had a left leg fracture and scalp cuts. His condition was listed as satisfactory.

YOUTH BREAKS CAGE RECORD

READING, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania may be producing another basketball player of the calibre of Don Hennon and Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain.

He is Ron Kirk who broke Chamberlain's three-year high school state scoring record Friday night. Kirk, 17, made 39 points in West Reading high's easy 96-31 victory over Schuylkill Valley, bringing his total to 2,253. That's one point better than the record set by Chamberlain at Philadelphia's Overbrook High, where he only played three years.

Kirk, a junior, is 6 foot 8, and is said to be still growing. But he'll have to grow five inches to reach the height of Chamberlain, the Philadelphia Warriors' rookie star.

He still has at least two more games this season and another year of play, so he's almost certain to break the four-year state record set by a much shorter man, the 5-9 Don Hennon, former All-America at Pitt.

Hennon ran up 2,376 points at Wampum High School.

Faces 32 Traffic Counts After Race

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — "I was always in front, but after awhile it seemed that everywhere I turned there was a police car," recalled Carl Pickering.

After his chase with police at 110 miles an hour he was jailed Friday under $6,400 bond. Officers wrote out 32 traffic tickets after curbing Pickering, 22, in his 1959 sedan.

They fired six warning shots and said the youth's car struck a tree, a utility pole and a truck. "I could have made it if I had not blown that tire," Pickering told newsmen. "I was ahead of all those police cars (28 took part) I even went 20 blocks after the tire blew out before they caught me."

Hawks Win Title For Fourth Year

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It doesn't come as exactly a surprise but the St. Louis Hawks have won the Western Division title in the National Basketball Assn. for the fourth straight year. And the Boston Celtics can wrap up the Eastern crown over the weekend with any combination of three victories and Philadelphia defeats.

The Hawks, leading the second-place Detroit Pistons by 13 1/2 games, wrapped up their title Friday night although dropping a 111-101 decision to the Minneapolis Lakers. The Pistons lost their only chance of tying when they fell to the Celtics 136-116.

PROJECT 20 IS EFFECTIVE SHOW FRIDAY

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — NBC's Project Twenty took another look at the past Friday night with an hour review of the years between Hiroshima and Korea, "Not So Long Ago."

For the most part, it was an effective show. Most of the great events were there. Churchill's Iron Curtain speech, Chambers accusing Hiss, Gen. Marshall proposing his plan with the warning, "the whole world hangs in the balance." The triumph of Harry S. Truman imitating H. V. Kaltenborn's prediction of his 1948 defeat. The atomic tests and Albert Einstein's warning of the bomb's menace to mankind.

There were some bitersweet memories of meat rations, "Kilroy was here," housing shortages and flying saucers. There were touching moments of a dying Babe Ruth saying goodbye at Yankee Stadium and Mayor LaGuardia reading the fumes. All these things were described in a remarkably restrained narration by Bob Hope.

Somewhat, "Not So Long Ago" did not seem up to the high standards of this excellent series. Perhaps it was because the postwar 40s were not remarkable years; they were a period of dissension and lack of values. The fault in the show may also be Project Twenty's in relying too much on newsreel clichés—America at play pictured by roller coasters, carnival scenes, etc. Any producer can put together standard news shots. The trick is to seek out the rare and incisive in movie journalism and to put the pieces together with reason and perspective.

Suspends Sentence For Aiding Escapee

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "No one knows what he would do in a similar situation," said U. S. District Judge John W. Lord Jr. as he sentenced a man and woman for helping their brother after his prison escape.

Lord sentenced Howard Jenkins, 33, and his sister, Edith Horn, 41, to nine months in jail Friday and then suspended the sentences.

They were accused of aiding James F. Jenkins after he broke out of Moyamensing Prison last April 30. He was recaptured three months later in Buffalo, N. Y.

Last month he was sentenced to 12 years for taking part in the $17,730 robbery of the suburban Lawrence Park branch of the Girard Trust Corn Exchange Bank last March 4.

DOCTOR CALLS NEW PRINCE 'LOVELY BABY'

By RAYMOND PALMER

LONDON (AP) — "It's a lovely baby."

That was the smiling verdict gynecologist John H. Peel relayed to Britons hungry for more particulars about Queen Elizabeth II's infant prince.

"The baby is doing fine and so is the Queen," said Peel after a late Friday night checkup at Buckingham Palace. A bunch of red roses from Prince Philip were by the Queen's bedside.

Seen By Brother

Her 1-day-old son lay in an adjoining room snuggled in a cream cot lined with blue-bowed pink satin under a nylon net.

His 11-year-old brother, Prince Charles and his sister, Princess Anne, 9, saw the new prince Friday.

As Britain rejoiced, speculation grew in court circles that President Eisenhower might be one of the baby's godparents, and that David might be one of the new prince's names. It is a name the President shares with many members of the royal family.

Names Secret

Names for the baby—he probably will get four like his brother and sister—are still a closely guarded secret. They will not be announced until just before the christening expected to be performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in about a month.

Congratulatory messages came in from all parts of the world. Late Friday night the palace post office already had dealt with 2,000 telegrams and cables, including messages from President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and Sir Winston Churchill.

Until he is 21, the new prince will have no income of his own. Then he will get an annual government grant of $28,000. This will be increased to $70,000 a year when he marries.

Shortly after announcement was made that the work was to be started anew.

8th Year For Sewer

Last year marked the eighth year of operation of the sewer system. The report showed that income received for sewer operations during the eight years was $409,575. Cost of operation was $217,421 for the eight years. A total of $96,583 in interest was paid during the period. Bonds totaling $41,000 were paid off and the total debt service during the eight year period was $170,772. Undistributed profits during the eight years totaled $24,888.

The eight year report shows that $3,000 of the debt was paid off during each year from 1952 through 1956. In 1957 $8,000 worth of bonds were retired and in 1958 and 1959 $9,000 worth of bonds were retired each year.

The report shows revenues increased by $10,632 during the eight-year period, from $46,880 in 1952 to $57,512 in 1959. At the same time the cost of operations increased from $18,698 to $34,943.

The report for the water system shows $25,441.42 worth of improvements during the last year including $12,323.78 for installation of 3.475 feet of eight-inch main and 500 feet of six-inch main along Route 15; $7,479.12 for installation of 3,500 feet of six-inch main at Woodcrest Estates; $969.86 for a lime machine; $1,798.73 for purchase of meters; $2,507.36 for renewal of services; and $362.57 for installation of 175 feet of six-inch main on Highland Ave.

Need Plant Additions

At the time of the report, 650 feet of six-inch main were being installed in Sunset Ave. at a cost of $1,366.67 and 900 feet of 6-inch main and a fire hydrant at Twin Oaks at a cost of $2,278.88.

The current report has a listing of the $372,851 spent for capital additions to the water system up to September 30. The list includes $8,186 for sedimentation basins; $32,566.11 for filters; $27,954.08 for the chemical treatment plant; $2,827.67 for improvements at the pumping station; $13,034.96 for new pumps; $83,316.30 for transmission mains; $44,978.88 for storage reservoir and standpipe which added 1,000,000-gallon additional storage to the system; $94,795.33 for distribution mains; $23,031.49 for services; $8,962.95 for meters; $8,229.15 for fire hydrants; $15,050.74 for equipment.

According to the engineers, "the authority should proceed with additions to the filter plant in accordance with plans and specifications already prepared as soon as funds are available. A report should be prepared on the possibility of reconstructing or constructing a dam on Marsh Creek to insure an adequate amount of storage of later to keep the filtration plant, with its proposed additions, supplied with water at all times. Additional in-town storage of water should be constructed. The above are major improvements to the system and will probably require financing through the issuance of additional bonds."

More Customers

The report shows the number of customers had increased from 1,926 to 2,038 since 1956, the number of public fire hydrants has increased from 84 to 92, the number of private fire hydrants has increased from 39 to 41 while the number of sprinkler systems remained the same — nine — throughout the four year period from 1956 to 1959.

The authority sold 228,107,000 gallons of water during the last year, or approximately 625,000 gallons per day. It delivered to the system 267,394,000 gallons or 732,600 gallons per day.

According to the authority the new mains installed in the community during the last few years, especially the large main from the water works to town via the Fairfield Rd., have already proven their value.

Met Fire Test

They noted that the new system was designed to provide water to all sections of town in sufficient quantity and pressure to meet all normal operating conditions. Officers of the authority were pleased that when the Adams House burned January 30 and more than 300,000 gallons of water was pumped on the fire, Municipal Authority officials directed where firemen should tap mains and as a result not only did the firemen have sufficient water at full pressure, but so did all of the 2,038 customers in town.

The 1960 budget adopted for the authority anticipates total income of $90,400 and operating expenditures of $87,200. Debt service will cost $29,704. Management fees will be $8,964 and administrative expenses will be $1,950. $1,792 is listed for capital additions. Undistributed earnings for the year, according to the budget will be $10,791.

The 1960 budget for the sewer division of the authority's operations shows income of $57,080 is anticipated while expenses will include $33,600 for operation, $21,508 for debt service, leaving an anticipated balance of $2,912.

3 Original Members

Three of the original members of the authority board, Ray M. Hoffman, the chairman, George T. Raffensperger, secretary-treasurer, and LeRoy Winebrenner have been members of the board since its founding in 1959. J. W. Kendlehart and A. E. Hutchison were named to the board to fill vacancies caused by the deaths of original members Ralph Z. Oyler and Henry W. Garvin. Eugene V. Bulleit has served as solicitor of the authority since its inception and Gannett Fleming Corddry and Carpenter have been the engineers. Municipal management has managed the authority since its establishment. Philip M. Dunn has been auditor for many years.

The authority was authorized by a Gettysburg borough council ordinance on June 7, 1948, and incorporated on June 18, 1948. It issued $50,000 worth of bonds on October 1, 1949, to purchase the Gettysburg Water Company.

Had Early Problem

The fall of 1951 produced a problem for the authority. Excessive drought conditions cut the supply from Marsh Creek to a trickle. The authority added a 500-gallon-per-minute deep well turbine pump and installed it on a deep well near the pumping station. The well proved capable of providing the water the town needed—but it provided excessively hard water. As a result one of the additions to the system was a plant to soften the well water if it is needed again. So said it was too early in the negotiations and study to make a definite prediction as to the outcome. He pointed out that one of the main factors to be considered involves the decision of forming a new seminary in a new location and he said that the committee will definitely consider, among other things, the loss to the schools involved in a transfer to another campus.

He said that the present commissions will report their recommendations to the boards of directors of the seminaries who in turn will report to the supporting synods.

It will be some time before those concerned with evaluating all the problems and issues involved in the proposed merger can reach a summation and make some definite recommendation.

Insofar as Gettysburg citizens are concerned they are gravely concerned over the possibility of losing the local seminary and many have expressed the desire of organizing a group to cooperate in a move to retain the local institution, if such a move is deemed propitious.

far Marsh Creek has provided all the water needed, but authority officials believe that the well water, after it runs through the new softening system, will prove acceptable if it is needed in the future.

The $1,066,000 figure for bonds sold by the water department of the Municipal Authority, while correct, is misleading, authority members note. While $1,066,000 worth of bonds were sold, $345,000 of that amount were bonds sold to quickly pay off original bonds. The original bonds bore an interest rate of from 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 per cent. By issuing other bonds at the proper moment, the authority was able to replace the 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 per cent bonds with bonds of between 1 1/2 to 2 per cent interest.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Mary M. Cardwell, 37, was sentenced to three years in prison after pleading guilty to illegally receiving $26,800 in dependency allowances from three servicemen husbands.

Her attorney said she had shared the money with parents and children of the husbands.

"You might be a sort of Robin Hood," Judge Bryan Simpson told Mrs. Cardwell, "but the fact that you were generous with this money doesn't change the fact that you defrauded the government."

Wholesale Infractions Of State Law Are Uncovered In Audit Of School Districts

By LEONARD A. UNGER
HARRISBURG (AP)—The first extensive public school audits in Pennsylvania are uncovering wholesale infractions of state law.

Most are comparatively trivial—a school board secretary using a rubber stamp to countersign the president's name to a check or failure to keep proper attendance records to qualify for state aid.

But Auditor Gen. Charles G. Smith reported other infractions—school board members be surcharged for the pocketing of income tax deductions by a board secretary to the padding of expense accounts filed by school personnel for a convention trip to Florida.

No Criminal Action
Official reports from Smith to Gov. David L. Lawrence also showed payment of state aid for vocational classes held only once a year, collection of vocational bonuses for a build-up plan open and participation of only the public but the school district nonemployees in a school district hospital insurance plan.

The governor's office said no legal action is contemplated at present. Budget Secretary David Baldwin said he has been "too busy" to examine the voluminous reports.

Dr. Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of public instruction, said erring school districts would see future state grants reduced by the amount of any fraudulent claims submitted by individual school boards.

Some Surcharged
Smith, in making the audit reports public today, said copies already have been sent to the districts involved. A recommendation in one case is that individual school board members be surcharged for unauthorized payments.

"We are finding hundreds of infractions as a result of our recent audits," Smith told the Associated Press. "By and large we find most school directors are conscientious job but many are running into trouble because of their unfamiliarity with the public school code."

The Legislature imposed safe-closed school bonuses for a build-up plan open and participation of only the public but the school district nonemployees in a school district hospital insurance plan.

The school audits are the outgrowth of the embezzlement of present. Budget Secretary David Baldwin said he has been "too busy" to examine the voluminous reports.

Dr. Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of public instruction, said erring school districts would see future state grants reduced by the amount of any fraudulent claims submitted by individual school boards.

12½ to 25-year jail sentence.

The 1958 Legislature appropriated $1,200,000 for the school audit program as a backstop to the work of school board-appointed auditors. The Commonwealth spends more than 700 million dollars every two years in grants to more than 2,300 school districts in Pennsylvania.

Check 300 Districts
The Justice Department ruled more than a year ago that the auditor general had the right to inspect the books of school districts but none of Smith's predecessors ever exercised it.

Smith said 60 field auditors, including certified public accountants as supervisors, have examined the books of some 300 districts with reports on about half of them completed.

The $1,200,000 appropriation already has been virtually made up, Smith said, by the discovery that state aid was still being paid for students coming from families living on military installations.

The State Supreme Court ruled in 1953 such children were not legal residents of Pennsylvania and not entitled to free public education.

Smith's audit report in the Cresson Joint School District in Cambria County for the year ended July 6, 1958 said the board secretary "converted school funds in the amount of $281.20 for his own benefit."

Tricky Secretary
The unidentified secretary, the report said, issued salary checks to himself from which federal income taxes had not been deducted but reported at the end of year that they had. Later on the report said, the board sent a check for $413 to the Internal Revenue Service for a deficiency in withheld income taxes.

"This resulted in an overpayment of $281.20 by the joint school district from which the secretary benefited," the report said. "In addition, federal income tax withheld was overpaid in the amount of $196.76. We were unable to determine who benefited from this overpayment."

In the same school district, the report said, members of the joint board received $430.81 in payment for materials purchased or services rendered during the 1957-58 school year. The report did not identify the particular board members or the specific materials or services.

Florida Convention
It noted, however, that no school board member may receive such payments except as provided in the school code.

An audit report for the North Strabane Twp. School District in Washington County said two unidentified school board members and an administrator each were overpaid for a convention trip to Florida.

Each received $330 for out-of-pocket expenses in addition to the $638 paid directly by the school district for their hotel and air travel expenses, the report said. It added each of three accounted for expenses of only $122.88 or an overpayment of $207.12 to each.

Recommend Action
"We recommend that the auditors of the school district disallow the orders approving the overpayment and charge the sum of $621.36 against the persons voting for or approving the orders," the report said. "We further recommend that in the future the board comply with the school code."

in reimbursing delegates only for expenses actually incurred."

Smith's audit of the accounts of Mahanoy Joint School District in Northumberland County said $3,796.60 was charged to the state during the 1957-58 school year for teachers salaries for vocational classes held once or twice a year.

The school district operates a cannery which processes fruit and vegetables for the public at a fee.

Hit Bookkeeping Methods
"The receipts and disbursements of the cannery are handled as an activities account and therefore do not appear on the general fund of the school district," the report said.

"However, the receipts of the general fund of the jointure for the year ended July 6, 1958, show a vocational appropriation from the Commonwealth for this extension activity in the amount of $3,769.60 representing a reimbursement of salaries paid by the cannery to the supervising principal and his wife."

"This item should be eliminated from instruction expense, the report said."

"Closed" School Used
The Dauphin School District in Dauphin County, another report said, claims and receives reimbursement for a closed school "formerly contained in a building presently housing" an operating school.

The audit report for the Farrell Area School District in Mercer County said "several persons not associated with the school district in any manner are being carried on the employees' hospitalization insurance plan."

"These unidentified persons properly reimburse the school district for their premiums, the report said, adding:

"We recommend the discontinuance of this procedure as these premiums are being paid prior to reimbursement by the individuals and district funds, in effect, are loaned for a reason not connected with the providing of education."

GRAHAM GAINS NEW INSIGHT ON PROBLEMS OF MISSIONARIES

By D. L. ROYLE
KADUNA, Nigeria (AP)—Billy Graham has gained a fresh insight into the problems of Christian missionaries in Nigeria's predominantly Moslem Northern Region.

The globe-trotting evangelist recently held a brief audience with the Sardauna of Sokoto, prime minister of the sprawling province with its 18 million Africans.

"I am dedicated to Allah," began the Sardauna with a trace of coolness. "I must do what I believe to be right. I will not budge one inch from my beliefs."

Religion Is Complex
"I feel I must be frank, Mr. Graham. Some missionaries engage too much in politics and poke their noses in places which do not concern them."

The meeting ended five minutes later with the Sardauna bidding Graham and his party a polite goodbye — and refusing to be photographed with them.

About 90 per cent of the people of the Northern Region profess Islam. But religion in Nigeria is more complex than mere profession.

Tolerances Attractive
Often it is impossible to distinguish between pagan and Moslem. Many who profess Islam could be called animists, believing that all objects have souls and practicing taboos, witchcraft and ritual killing.

Many missionaries believe that the tolerances of Islam, like the possession of multiple wives, are responsible for the overwhelming trend toward the Moslem faith.

Virtually every village and compound has its ju ju — idols, omens and spirits.

These pagan customs of centuries are not easily discarded. Missionaries have discovered a smattering of Christian practices among the pagans. Their origins are uncertain, probably left by some wandering missionary of bygone days.

Once a year in the village of Kujama a goat is slaughtered amid ritual ceremonies and its blood plastered over a small round mud hut, a sacred place in the compound.

Have Difficulties
Missionary Bob Cobb of Oklahoma City, who has preached the gospel in Nigeria for 10 years, says:

"I asked the headman why he performed this ritual. He explained 'somewhere I hear you make a gift to your god. You gave him lamb, gold and other things. You cook animals and feast. We give our god goat blood, which he likes.'"

"This kind of answer makes missionary work extremely difficult."

Century-Old Sickles-Key Tragedy

Vicious Homicide Stuns Social and Official Washington

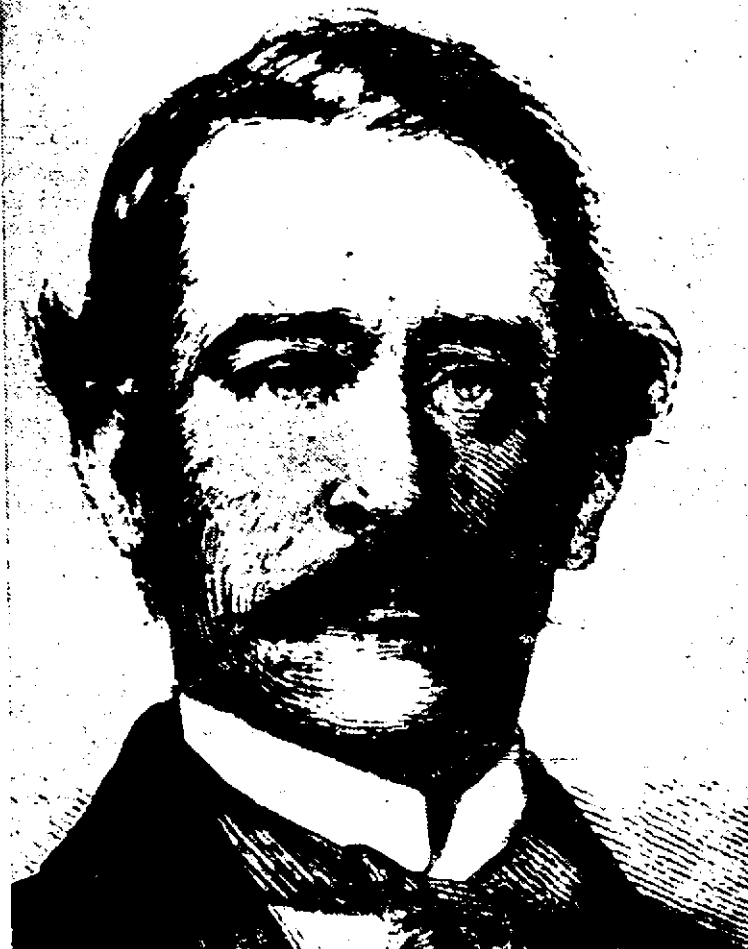

By Leighton C. Taylor

Editor's Note:—This is the second and last installment of the exciting article on the General Sickles, Philip Barton Key tragedy that rocked the national capital many years.

Philip Barton Key, among his many accomplishments, was a competent horseman and man of fashion. Not a matron with a marriageable daughter but had her net spread for him.

Key and Sickles first met at a stag party. Their next meeting was at Buchanan's inaugural ball, which, of course, Teresa and Dan attended. Sickles asked and was honored with a dance by Miss Lane, the President's beautiful and accomplished niece. Later in the evening Key sought out Sickles to secure his endorsement for re-appointment as United States attorney. Dan told Key, "There is no one I would rather oblige than you, and I think I can arrange it." While they were so engaged Teresa joined them and was duly presented to Key who almost immediately asked her for the next dance. They made an unusually attractive couple, while Dan, busy talking politics, paid little attention to their departure.

Sensational Ending
Thus began a friendship the sensational and homicidal ending of which startled and shocked the nation's capital, as well as the country at large, as nothing had that preceded it, the two presidential assassinations excepted. Sickles dearly loved his young wife, but by nature gregarious and possessing unusual talent for making friends and playing politics he unintentionally neglected

PHILIP BARTON KEY

Teresa. In fact, politics was his first love. To Dan it was the highly practical art of rewarding loyalty and friendship; and at his next meeting with Key he was happy to be able to tell him "I have urged your re-appointment with the President and I am sure it will be done as you wish." Dan loved to entertain and to live graciously in spite of his preoccupation with politics. In keeping with his official position he leased a spacious three-story mansion facing Lafayette Square.

In Heart Of Aristocracy

Among other advantages the house was located in the very heart of Washington aristocracy, only a stone's throw across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House where sat his good friend President Buchanan. Dan had the mansion redecorated from kitchen to attic. A carriage, driving and saddle horses, a full staff of servants, and a well stocked cellar were available, and ere long the Sickles household became the scene of grand dinners and lavish entertainment.

Philip Barton Key was a regular and consistent guest at these affairs. Because of his social prestige he added luster to them and was always welcome. Expenses incident to this sort of social activity were more than Dan's congressional salary could satisfy and necessitated taking on legal work in New York. This meant frequent absences from Washington which afforded Key and Teresa opportunities for carrying on a clandestine love affair. As time passed they became more and more indiscreet, and indulged in behavior unthinkable of persons of their social status.

Not Far From Slums
It should be mentioned here that Washington was then (and to some extent is today) a city in which a shabby, cheap neighborhood could be found only two or three blocks from a fashionable section. Lafayette Square, in the center of which is the well known equestrian statue of Andrew Jackson, is bordered by the famous Stephen Decatur House, St. John's historic Church, the Dolly Madison House, Belasco Theater formerly the Washington Club; and, at the time of our story, only two blocks distant was a poor neighborhood inhabited by a conglomeration of nondescript whites and negroes.

One morning a tall, distinguished looking man dismounted from his iron grey horse in the neighborhood mentioned and inquired if a certain house nearby was for rent. It was, and a negro, the owner, rented it to Philip Barton Key "for a senator friend." Not long afterward smoke was seen curling from the chimney which aroused the curiosity of the neighborhood, and in due course the secret affair (the illicit meeting in the house of Key and Teresa) was gossiped about and known apparently by almost everybody except one person — Daniel Edgar Sickles.

Key, who lived at the Washington Club across the square from the Sickles mansion, had an arrangement with Teresa by which they could inform each other whether or not the coast was clear and the time propitious for a meeting at their rendezvous. This was done by a clever waving of white handkerchiefs.

Teresa Admits Guilt

An anonymous letter finally put Dan on the trail, resulting, after exhaustive investigation by Dan, in Teresa's admission of guilt, in part, as follows:

"I have been in a house on 15th Street with Mr. Key x x x I believe the house belongs to a colored man. Have been there alone with Mr. Key. I did what is usual for a wicked woman to do. We arranged meetings when we met on the street or at parties."

Dan was furious, consulted friends who tried to avert a tragedy, but to no avail. At the moment, Key smartly clad was strolling in the Square not far from the Sickles Mansion, unaware of Teresa's confession and the strained relations in the household. As had been his custom when arranging a meeting he drew a white handkerchief from his pocket and waved it several times. Dan, seeing him, screamed "That villain is out there now making signals." Hurriedly arming himself he rushed out yelling, "Key, you scoundrel, you have dishonored my bed, you must die." Taking deliberate aim he fired. Key, begging for mercy, fell into the gutter, and Sickles fired again and again, the third time his Colt revolver failing him. Key, however, was dying and was carried to the Washington Club, where he died shortly thereafter.

Willing To Surrender

Dan, thrusting friends aside, said he was going to the home of Attorney General Black to give himself up. By the way, the Attorney General was a distinguished native of Pennsylvania. Jeremiah Sullivan Black, born in Somerset County, and admitted to the Bar before becoming of age, served as Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Attorney General in Buchanan's Cabinet, and for a few months was Secretary of State. He was considered the most influential of Buchanan's advisers, and a leading lawyer of the American Bar.

After a painful interview with Judge Black Dan returned to his house. There he found Teresa, her jet black hair in wild disarray, and her great dark eyes in one crazed stare. "Yes, I've killed him," shouted Dan flinging himself on a bed in the meanwhile the Mayor of Washington entered the room and made Dan compose himself and get ready to go to jail. At the jail he was committed on a charge of homicide, and, refusing bail despite many urgent offers, he walked to his cell in utter emotional exhaustion. It must be borne in mind that throughout his entire ordeal he was accompanied by friends offering to help in any way they could.

Sell Personal Effects

Meanwhile the body of Barton Key, followed by friends, was borne to the Georgetown Cemetery. Shortly thereafter his personal effects, including his riding horse, were sold, particularly to souvenir hunters.

The District jail was a foul hole, swarming with vermin, destitute of sewage, bath, water, and adequate ventilation. Unable to change Dan's determination about bail his friends insisted that he at least be given a clean cell. Accordingly the Warden gave his own room to Dan. This was a great relief. He now had a decent room with a clean bed, table, several chairs, and lighted by a well-barred window. He was being deluged with mail, the first from his good friend, President Buchanan, and he was now able to answer some of it.

A servant, acting for the still prostrate Teresa, sent Dan a trunk filled with wearing apparel, cigars, books, and writing material. His friend, James T. Brady, hurriedly arrived from New York without being called, to take charge of Dan's defense. With him he had Edwin M. Stanton, leader of the Maryland Bar, and later Lincoln's Secretary of War, who declared while standing alongside Lincoln's deathbed, "Now he belongs to the ages," and John Graham, outstanding member of the Washington Bar. Three other prominent Washington lawyers, Ratcliffe, Chilton and Magruder, together with the foremost member of the Alabama Bar, Congressman Phillips, constituted the defense battery.

On Prosecution Side

On the prosecution side we find one Robert Ould, until recently Assistant United States Attorney, and promoted to the position held by the deceased, Barton Key. He was in an embarrassing situation called upon to invoke justice against the accused to whom, indirectly, he owed his connection with the United States Attorney's office. Assisting him was one J. M. Carlisle of the District Bar. The Honorable T. H. Crawford, of Washington, was the presiding Judge.

On April 4, 1839, the trial got underway in the Criminal Court for the District of Columbia. Three days were required to select a jury. The difficulty was that the most prospective jurors had made up their minds — several declared that the shooting was justified.

At 10 a.m. Dan entered the court room accompanied by the Marshal and several friends. Well groomed, he bore himself with dignity and ease.

With jury box filled the trial began, lasting 13 days. Counsel for each side frequently achieved eloquence that any practitioner of the art of advocacy today would envy. It took John Graham, one of the seven lawyers for the defense, a day and a half to make his opening statement. The jury was out 10 minutes, the verdict NOT GUILTY. Sickles later forgave his young wife who, in a month or so, left Washington never to return. She lived in New York City until her death a few years later, doubtless of a broken heart. Dan was elected to the next Congress, raised a regiment for the Civil War, and was a Major-General in the Battle of Gettysburg where he lost his right leg. Later he became our Minister to Spain, and returned to Congress in 1895. He died in New York City May 3, 1914.

Woman In Background

In whatever he undertook, at home or abroad, some woman, usually a questionable character, was to be found in the background. In this connection a clue following from the unfriendly old New York World during Dan's career. The story described Dan correctly as "one of the most remarkable men of our time," going on to state that he was remarkable chiefly for villainy. Starting with Sickles' boyhood, it recounted follies and jousts with the law. It depicted him sleeping in a drunken stupor in a brothel with Fannie White. It recalled the rumor that he had taken some of the proceeds from Fannie's bawdy house to further his political ambitions. It stated that he had the unparalleled audacity to take Fannie to London with him when he became Buchanan's Secretary of Legation and present her to Queen Victoria. Neither did it forget his deliberate killing of Key, and his reconciliation with his wife to prevent disclosure of forgery and other crimes; and it also commented on his incompetent and conniving service as a General.

Notwithstanding his greatly publicized participation in the Battle of Gettysburg no memorial or monument is to be found on the field in his honor. Attending the 50th Anniversary of the Battle in 1913 he was asked about this and he replied, "The whole damn field is my memorial." But the New York Times said something about Dan that nobody can deny: "HE WAS A TRULY ADVENTUROUS SPIRIT."

IN RAILROAD
COLLISION

MEYERSDALE, Pa. (AP) — Twenty-one persons were injured — three critically — Friday in the collision of a two-unit Baltimore & Ohio railroad train and a stopped work train near this southwestern Pennsylvania town.

The B & O train, running 24 minutes behind schedule, rammed into the rear of the work train. It was enroute from Pittsburgh to Baltimore and carried about 150 passengers.

The work train crew was repairing lines knocked out by heavy snow during the past 24 hours. At the time of the crash it was snowing, windy and cold with snow drifts six feet deep. A railroad spokesman said signals were not operating at the time.

Nine Hospitalized

Admitted to Meyersdale Community Hospital in critical condition were Michael Sam, 48, West Newton, Pa.; Ethel Johnson, 50, of Baltimore, and Earl Adams, 55, of Baltimore, the train steward.

Of the other 18 persons injured, nine were hospitalized. The cause of the wreck was not immediately determined.

The engineer, L. S. May, 60, of Connellsville, was listed in fair condition at Connellsville State Hospital.

"The train was running under for a woman who is free what we call 'manual block rules' — whereby the engineer is expected to be able to stop on sight of an obstruction," the B & O spokesman said. "We do not know what caused the wreck but an investigation is under way."

Go To Cumberland

One car from the wrecked passenger train reached Cumberland Friday night with 127 passengers. Several of them got off there, but others continued to Washington on another train.

Mrs. Paul Coners, 53, Ellwood City, was reported in fair condition at Meyersdale Hospital.

Two Pittsburghers also were hospitalized. Anna Foster, 62, was in fair condition with a fractured jaw and chest injuries. Genevieve Conti was listed in good condition with a broken nose.

Three persons were treated and released at Connellsville Hospital. They were Mrs. Anna Mae Schultz, Mt. Pleasant R. 1, Robert Lloyd Jr., 2, Mt. Pleasant R. 1 and William A. Bradley, Connellsville, a water on the train.

WIND-DRIVEN
SNOW CHOKES
WESTERN N. Y.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Wind-driven snow choked off a vast section of western New York today as winter storms battered the Northeast for the second time this week.

Sixteen deaths were reported in six states.

Sections of Pennsylvania and northern New England also bore the brunt of the storm that began Thursday.

Winds Drive Snow

Although the snowfall let up, winds that reached 50 miles an hour churned the snow into drifts up to 10 feet Friday night.

The blow felled power and telephone lines and crippled small vessels off the New England coast.

Heavy, wet snow collapsed the roof of a bowling alley near Buffalo, trapping Mrs. Robert Hammen, 18, under a fallen beam. She was taken to a hospital for treatment of leg injuries.

Snowplow crews were unable to cope with the drifts along sections of the New York Thruway and the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

Widespread Snow

The Thruway closed a 130-mile section — from Syracuse west to Williamsville. A 175-mile stretch of the Pennsylvania Turnpike — from near Pittsburgh east to Carlisle — also became impassable.

Thousands of travelers of the superhighways took refuge in restaurants.

Nearly all highways in a six-county western New York area around Rochester were closed.

Twenty inches of snow, the season's heaviest fall, blanketed N.Y. Southern and eastern Vermont were hit with up to a foot.

MECO Puts New Substation Along Fairfield Road In Operation; Increases Community's Power Supply

With the placing in operation of its new Franklin substation along the Fairfield Road, Metropolitan Edison Company has completed a third major step in forging an electrical loop around Gettysburg. Built to increase both the size and dependability of the community's power supply, the substation and connecting power line cost $85,000.

"Opening of the substation represents more than an increase in facilities," William A. Lentz, the utility's Gettysburg district manager said. "It is a major electrical achievement for Gettysburg, or any similar-sized community, to obtain these extensive facilities in an age when the use of electricity is a barometer of industrial progress and modern living. In building the Franklin substation, MECO gave tangible recognition to the community's growth and to its belief that it will have an even brighter future."

Until a year ago Gettysburg and vicinity obtained electricity from a substation along the Lincoln Highway near the borough's eastern line. Then a new substation was built at Seven Stars and connected to the Lincoln substation and also to the Orrtanna substation.

Doubles Available Power

A transmission line has been built from Lincoln substation to Franklin substation and in the future will be extended to Orrtanna whereupon these four substations will form a loop over which power can be transmitted in either direction and which will permit the switching of customers from one power source to another in time of emergency.

This latest addition increases the total amount of electricity available in the Gettysburg area to 10,600 KVA, or more than double the 4,800 KVA which was available in 1950. During this ten-year period the number of customers served in the three steps of one of these

Using a hydraulic compressor to obtain a perfect bond, Ross R. Myers, Gettysburg R. 1, and Charles L. Fair Jr. (left), 645 S. Washington St., connect distribution lines from Gettysburg to the new Franklin substation which Metropolitan Edison Company constructed along the Fairfield Rd. at a cost of $85,000. With the help of rubber coverings they put the substation into operation without interrupting service.

Gettysburg district increased 20 per cent to 7,588 but most of the increase is being used to operate new labor saving devices in factories and on farms, to improve lighting in stores and schools and to bring increased comfort and convenience to homes.

"Providing for dependable electric service is a never ending cycle of three steps which must be taken in order," Lentz said. "First, of course, is to increase generating facilities, the second is to extend transmission facilities and the third is to enlarge distribution lines. When the Franklin-Orrtanna line is built, this ten-year period the number of customers served in the three steps of one of these cycles will have been completed by MECO which already is starting a new cycle by building an addition to its Portland generating station and by planning to build a 13,800 volt transmission line from Gettysburg to Littlestown. The latter project is part of a project planned to install another ring of lines in the vast electrical network covering York and Adams Counties."

Man-Made Lake In York Overflowing

HARRISBURG (AP) — Runoff from recent rain and melting snow has filled to overflowing the new man-made lake in Gifford Pinchot State Park in York County.

Maurice K. Goddard, forests and waters secretary, made the report Friday after an inspection trip to the new park.

The fish commission said the lake will be stocked in the next few days with minnows. Large mouth bass will be stocked in the early spring. Black crappies will be stocked in the summer, muscullunge and walleyes in September, and brown bullheads next year.

The commission said the lake will be posted against fishing long enough for the small fish to grow and multiply.

REPRIEVE OF CHESSMAN IS NOT POPULAR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown's 60-day reprieve for Caryl Chessman, popular with opponents of capital punishment, stirred a mounting storm of criticism today.

In Sacramento, legislators protested that the governor proposed to dump the problem in their laps by calling a special session in March—concurrent with the budget session—to reconsider abolishing the death penalty in the state.

In Washington, D.C., critics blasted the State Department for notifying the governor of adverse reaction to be expected in South America by President Eisenhower if the Chessman execution should take place. The President starts a four-nation, South American tour next week.

Brown, when he announced he was calling off Chessman's execution scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday to let the California Legislature decide the issue of capital punishment, said he also had given serious consideration to the message from Asst. Secretary of State Roy R. Rubottom Jr. It said hostile demonstrations could be expected in Uruguay and Brazil if the 38-year-old convict-author should be executed in San Quentin.

Governmental leaders in Uruguay applauded the reprieve. Western Europe generally approved the action but criticized the motive.

Gov. Brown pointed out that although he reprieved Chessman for 60 days, "I am still convinced he is guilty."

Chessman, 38, whose parents are dead, says another man committed the crimes he was convicted of. He says he knows the man, but refuses to reveal his name.

Admittedly a habitual criminal, the hawk-nosed Chessman, now 38, was first arrested as a car thief at the age of 16. He served terms in reformatories and California prisons for robbery and other crimes. He had been on parole only a month when he was arrested in January 1948 as the "Red Light Bandit," so called because he used a red cloth over his car's spotlight to simulate a police car.

He was convicted in Los Angeles Superior Court of abducting two young women, and forcing them into acts of bestial depravity.

Convicted On 17 Counts

He was convicted on 17 counts, two of kidnapping with bodily harm, which carries the death sentence under California's Little Lindbergh Law. The 15 others ranged down to robbery, attempted rape and car theft.

No one died, but one of his victims is today in a mental institution.

Gov. Brown, who was state's attorney general during much of the time the Chessman case was in the courts, said at a special clemency hearing last October that the evidence of Chessman's guilt was "overwhelming." Brown refused clemency then.

Chessman himself insisted over and over again that he was not the red light bandit—a criminal, yes, admittedly, but not the sex terrorist.

Acted As Attorney

Chessman acted as his own attorney in his trial, and through most of his early appeals. He taught himself enough law in prison to bring his case repeatedly before appellate courts.

With the money from his books, he managed to employ professional counsel in later years, although Davis said only Thursday that he personally had spent $5,000 on Chessman and never collected a dime.

The past four days were days of successive defeats for Chessman.

On Monday a three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to intervene. On Tuesday, an appeal to Justice Felix Frankfurter of the U.S. Supreme Court was rejected.

Reject Mercy Plea

On Wednesday the California Supreme Court voted 4-3 not to recommend that the governor extend clemency.

Only Thursday, the California Supreme Court by the same vote rejected a new plea for mercy.

The governor said that this put it entirely out of his hands. For under California law clemency to a previously convicted felon cannot be given without the high court's consent.

However, Brown still retained the disputed power to stay the execution, and this he did.

Chessman, seemingly assured and self-confident, had sent a telegram to the governor, urging him to do as his conscience dictated, and he sent a secret letter to the governor Thursday night. But to reporters at a press conference Wednesday he conceded that he believed there was nothing left for him but the green walled gas chamber.

He was in his bunk next to that chamber Friday morning when the word came—a 60-day reprieve.

Thomas Jefferson was an enthusiastic book collector, spent hours browsing through the sidewalk carts of book peddlers in Paris.

NEW MURDER TRIAL SOUGHT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Counsel for Ernest E. Storch, convicted in the 1953 slay-for-pay murder of his wife, wants a new trial for the 37-year-old Butler County man.

Atty. S. H. Reichman said Friday he will file a motion for a new trial on the advice of Lt. Gov. John Morgan Davis, State Pardons Board chairman. State Atty. Gen. Anne X. Alpen also agreed with Davis' advice, Reichman said.

Storch is serving a life sentence along with two other defendants, Russell Budd, 35, and Walter Henderson, 33, both of Pittsburgh.

Budd and Anderson testified that they were hired by Storch to kill Mrs. Alice Marie Storch.

Davis' advise to ask for a new trial came after Reichman presented affidavits from Henderson and Budd saying that they were forced to give certain testimony at Storch's trial.

The affidavits repudiated the trial statements of the pair.

Buy High Quality Seeds Of Right Variety, Agent Advises

By FRANK S. ZETTLE
County Farm Agent

Two important facts should be kept in mind when buying seed. First, select varieties which have been tested and proven superior in Pennsylvania. Then buy high quality seed of those varieties.

Seed of different varieties look alike, and there is no way to tell seed of high-yielding varieties from seed of lower-yielding varieties. But, if certified seed is bought, you can be sure of getting the variety wanted. The certified seed tag on a bag of seed assures purchasers of getting seed from a field which was inspected and found to have high varietal purity. Assurance is given, too, that the seed is well graded, free of prohibited and noxious weeds, and of high germination.

Frequently there are price differences between different sources of the same variety. Farmers are urged to keep in mind that certification sets minimum standards for high quality, and there may be variations in percentage germinations, weed and other crop seed content, color, grading and appearance above these minimums. Obviously, seed which germinated 87 per cent is not worth as much as seed which germinated 96 per cent if other quality factors are equal.

Too often seed is bought on the basis of price alone. Low priced seed almost without exception is of poor quality, contains objectionable weed seeds, or is of a variety unadapted variety, when planted results in poor seeding establishment and lower yields, and consequently, causes a serious loss at harvest time.

When buying seed farmers should always read the analysis tag on the bag, and then purchase seed of the brands which consistently bag the best quality seed.

Keep Layers Eating

One of the main reasons for a slump in egg production is a drop in feed consumption. If poultrymen detect a decline in feed consumption, there are certain practices which will increase the feed intake.

One way to increase feed consumption is to furnish mash in a different and appealing form. The simplest way to do this is to feed pellets. Feed the amount of pellets the birds will clean up in one hour. Wet mash, made by mixing mash and water, is also very appealing to the birds. Moisture three pounds of dry mash for each 100 birds. Since mixing wet mash is quite laborious, just pour two quarts of water per 100 birds over the dry mash in the feeders for the same effect. Chickens are fond of both wet mash and pellets and both methods of feeding are helpful in getting more mash into them.

Feeding supplements such as semisolid milk or other milk by-products is a good way to increase feed intake. Semisolid milk should be fed at the rate of three pounds per day for 100 birds. Some folks supply extra antibiotics if the birds are off feed because they are out of condition.

Provide ample feeding space. This is important in maintaining maximum feed intake. Three to four-five-foot feeders should be provided for 100 birds. With all mash rations some growers provide 40 feet of feeding space per 100 layers. Many poultrymen have found that frequent stirring of the

Be Sure of Seed—The blue tag of certification indicates pure, high-quality seed of an identified variety, reports Clarence Bryner, Penn State extension agronomist. He says that with certified seed the original breeder is known, and certified seed crops are inspected in the field and laboratory to ensure high quality.

Safety First—Use caution around animals at all times, remind Penn State extension livestock specialists. Let them know when you enter the barn or stalls. Be especially careful when young animals are with their mothers. Use a staff when leading the bull. When working with hogs use a hurdle for protection.

Stop Paint Damage—A common cause of blistering, scaling, or peeling of paint is moisture, according to Penn State extension agricultural engineers. Internal moisture is worse than that from outside. The engineers say that this moisture can be prevented from entering the wall by using a vapor barrier on the inside wall.

Allow Trim on Logs—You can save money by allowing three inches of trim when you cut sawlogs. Penn State extension foresters say sawmill operators need at least that much extra length when they scale your logs.

Spring in Wintertime—A breath of spring can be introduced in the home by forcing into bloom some branches of flowering shrubs, reminds Mrs. Lynn Smith, Penn State extension floriculturist. Among them are forsythia, pussy willows, flowering quince, and rebud.

Changes in Farming—Changes in agriculture are stepping up the requirements for management and money, says Wayne Kelly, Penn State extension farm management specialist.

Home Economist Tells Of Points To Be Considered In Buying Carpets, Fabric

MRS. HELEN TUNISON
Adams County Home Economist

When buying a carpet keep in mind that the carpet as a whole is important, not just the fibers. Consider carpet fiber and construction and a room's wear requirements in making this selection.

Surface Fiber—Surface fiber represents 30 to 60 per cent of the weight of a square yard of carpet. Because the carpet industry is highly competitive, generally less money means less yarn and poor wearing quality.

The way a manufacturer styles, spins, dyes, weaves, tufts and finishes a fiber and engineers construction contributes to carpet price and quality. A guide to quality is the denser a carpet, that is, the more tightly the yarns are packed together, the better a carpet.

Consider Room Needs

In deciding which carpet is a good buy for her, a homemaker should consider a room's wear requirements, then discuss these requirements with a carpet salesperson. If she wishes to carpet two rooms alike and they have different wear requirements, she may save money by buying two carpets which look alike but contain different amounts of yarn.

A blend of fiber, nylon and wool is showing excellent wearing qualities for heavy traffic areas. The rug should have at least 20 per cent nylon to make the carpet abrasive resistant over a long period of time.

Selecting good quality cushioning is as important as selecting a good quality carpet or rug. A rug cushion or pad gives added comfort and can increase the life of a carpet or rug by as much as 50 per cent.

Selection Of Cushion

Buy rug cushioning from a reputable dealer and choose a material that stays resilient over a long period of time. Available rug cushioning materials include hair, jute, plastic foam, sponge and foam rubber and combinations of these materials such as hair-jute.

A 41-ounce hair or a 1/4-inch sponge rubber cushioning gives you resiliency needed to withstand heels, chair legs and heavy furniture.

Fabric texture is more than surface appearance. It includes how a fabric feels, looks and drapes or pleats. Two fabrics may have a similar texture but differ greatly. An example is cotton sateen and silk satin, both smooth surface fabrics. In cotton sateen the smoothness goes across the width of the fabric from selvage to selvage. In silk satin the smoothness runs the length of the fabric. The amount of mercerizing used on the cotton yarns affects the luster of cotton sateen while the length and smoothness of silk filaments

Women Anglers Join Men On Pier

LONG BRANCH, N. J. (AP)—The little woman, togged in everything from long johns to army surplus hand-me-downs, has found her way to the pier here to join her outdoorsman in the rigors of winter fishing.

And she seems to be enjoying it.

Many of the women who line the pier are as zealous in the pursuit of fish as their husbands—and complain less of the cold.

And as one grandmother, who joins her husband once a week on a pier to fish, explained: "It's our night out."

Daily Records Uniform In U. S.

Dairy herd records keeping has moved a step nearer the ideal of a nationally uniform system with development of the new Dairy Herd Improvement Registry (DHIA) record, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported today.

This new record plan is designed to meet requirements of the production record-keeping program of various dairy cattle breed registry organizations. A DHIA record is essentially a standard DHIA (Dairy Herd Improvement Association) record plus some additional features to meet the needs of breed registering organizations. The record must be calculated in one of the various DHIA electronic computing centers.

Confusion resulting from the differences between the methods of keeping dairy production records used by the several herd and breed improvement associations in the U. S. led to the effort to develop a more comprehensive and uniform system. The DHIA record plan, designed for farmers having registered cattle, is the result of several years of cooperative work by the American Dairy Science Association's Records and Breed Relations committee, the Purebred Dairy Cattle Association's Testing committee and the breed registry groups.

The adoption of the DHIA record by USDA-coordinated National Cooperative Dairy Herd Improvement Program increases to four the number of recordkeeping plans that the program offers to dairy farmers owning registered cattle. Other plans include the Standard DHIA, Owner-Sampler, and Weigh-a-Day-a-Month. This cooperative program has made important contributions to lowering milk production costs and improving dairy herds since 1906.

Earliest libraries in colonial America were privately owned. Notable were those of Elder William Brewster of Plymouth, Gov. Winthrop of Connecticut, Dr. Cotton Mather of Boston and Col. Ralph Wormeley of Virginia.

Roth Cites Greatness Of Lincoln Even In Failure

Was Abraham Lincoln a failure?

Last Monday evening G. Henry Roth, a reporter for The Gettysburg Times, addressed the Rotary Club on this question. In a report of his talk in Tuesday's edition The Times published a condensed version because of limited space. Today The Times completes Mr. Roth's report as follows:

"There are those who say Lincoln suffered a great setback because he was in love with a beautiful young woman, to whom he became engaged, then she died. If we can put any trust at all in letters Lincoln wrote, in statements he is quoted as making, in his action throughout his life, he married a beautiful woman with whom he was very much in love—and lived with her until he died."

Failed In Appointment

"It is true he failed to get an appointment as a commissioner on the U.S. Land Office when he was completing his term as a congressman, but let's consider the situation. He had already recommended two men for the post. He became ambitious for it only later, and then submitted his candidacy, only if the two men he had previously recommended would withdraw. He was offered the governorship of the territory of Oregon—certainly something that could be called a success—but he turned it down, preferring to enlarge his law practice."

"And there again, can anyone call a self-taught man, who became one of the great lawyers of his day in Illinois, a failure? Certainly that in itself would be success enough for an average man."

"Much is made of the fact that he stepped down after serving as a congressman for one term. But Lincoln was a Whig, and just before he became a congressman had publicly repudiated his predecessor for daring to seek another term because of the Whig principle of rotation in office. Could Lincoln justifiably have attempted to succeed himself? He didn't, even though such a course was urged upon him."

Defeated In 1856

"He is called a failure because he was defeated for the vice presidency nomination in 1856. Again let us look at the record. Here is a Whig politician who became a Republican in 1856. That same year he received 110 votes for the vice presidential nomination without any effort on his part, or any great interest in the nomination. Is that failure?"

"In 1858 Douglas defeated him in a campaign for the senatorship. But the defeat made Lincoln President of the U.S. and nationally known. Could one call that a failure?"

"Much is made of the fact that Lincoln as a youth failed in business. He was taken into partnership in a business that was on the verge of bankruptcy. When it failed, Lincoln could have walked out a man free of debt."

had he wished, He didn't wish to do so, and during the next 15 years paid off every cent, even though he was not obligated to do so. How could anyone say a man of such character was a failure?"

Traced In Speeches

"The growth of Lincoln can be traced through his writings and his speeches, yet one can detect traces of the Lincoln that is to be from his writings in his earliest years. His love of country and his love of the institutions founded by the founders of the nation are apparent from the earliest years. In 1837 we find him stating in the Illinois legislature that he believed 'the institution of slavery is founded on both injustice and bad policy; but the promulgation of abolitionist doctrines tends rather to increase than to abate its evils.' He was to change his mind only on the latter part of that statement."

"His love for the institutions of our government were rarely more clearly outlined than in an address given in 1838 at the Young Men's Lyceum in Springfield, declaring that 'we find ourselves under the government of a system of political institutions conducting more essentially to the ends of civil and religious liberty than any of which history of former times tells us,' he said that 'This ours only to transmit (this government) to the latest generation that fate shall permit the world to know. This task, gratitude to our fathers, justice to ourselves, duty to posterity and love for our species in general all imperatively require us faithfully to perform.'"

Nation In Danger

"He named the institutions of the nation were threatened by mob violence occurring at that moment in the U.S. Declaring that no outside force could conquer the United States, he still felt that our nation was in danger, stating: 'At what point shall we expect the approach of danger? I answer, if it ever reach us, it must spring up amongst us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time, or die by suicide.'"

"Lincoln was then 29 years old. 'We come finally to Lincoln at was a sound idea as long as one man was doing the measuring. But when two men began arguing over a boundary, they needed a thumb they both respected. The chief might provide the standard measurement for a village, but there was trouble again when another village was involved."

In the 1100's, a Scottish king named David compromised; he decreed that an inch was the average of the thumbs of three men—a small man, a man of medium stature, and a large man—"measur'd at the rut of the nayll."

England wouldn't buy that, and a few years later Richard I made the first law requiring actual standards for measurement. These were iron bars, guarded by sheriffs. In case of a dispute, the item in question could be measured against the standard. The iron didn't wear well, however, and copies made from the original were crude.

According to World Book Encyclopedia, Edward I tried his hand at standardizing the inch in the 1300's. He declared that one inch should be equal to three barleycorns taken from the center of the ear and placed end to end."

The French, bursting with equality during their revolution, thought that was typical of royal whimsy and let the scientists take over. The result was the metric system, based on the decimal system, which the Egyptians had been using for centuries.

France adopted the system and many nations followed suit.

In 1875, 17 nations including the U. S. set up the International Bureau of Weights and Measures near Paris. Standards of the meter and the kilogram, made of an alloy of platinum and iridium, were placed in the Bureau, the duplicates were sent to the governments of the founding nations."

The U. S. was reluctant to give up the yard and the pound, measures which it had taken from England. But in 1893 it adopted the metric system as the standard for legally defining these measures.

Except for the U. S., Great Britain and most of the British Commonwealth nations, most countries have adopted the metric system. It is used in science . . . in measuring radio waves and electric current . . . and in all U. S. government departments dealing in tariff operations, in coinage money, and in weighing foreign mail."

Playing cards were the first paper money used in North America. In 1685 the French colonial governor of Canada failed to receive money from France to pay his troops. When the soldiers threatened to desert, the governor seized all playing cards and declared that they were to be honored as currency when bearing his signature.

Inflied Pete Runnels of the Boston Red Sox hit safely in 17 straight games last season."

It took centuries for men to agree on a standard length for the inch. But outside of the English-speaking countries, most people would call it a waste of time.

The inch started out as the width of a man's thumb. That Gettysburg. Here, at the dedication of a national cemetery, the North was speaking of its victory over the South. Even Dr. Stockton, who gave the prayer, scored the Rebels. Edward Everett spoke of the South as if it were some horrible enemy. But when Lincoln spoke there was no word of hatred. 'The brave men living and dead who fought here dedicated it far above our poor power to add or detract.'

Look To The Future

"And he was to make another strange choice of words. He spoke of dedication that 'government of the people, by the people for the people shall not perish,' not from the United States, or the continent, or the nation but 'from the earth.'"

"Could it be that the Lincoln who had grown to such greatness from such humble beginnings, standing on the soil at Gettysburg, looked far into the future and realized, for he was a student of history that only a united, strong nation could remain free."

"There is evidence in his earlier speeches that he realized that the world looked to the U.S. for evidence that free government could exist. Did he at Gettysburg look down the long corridors of history 'to the present time and see America, made strong and united by a Civil war whose turn from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time, or die by suicide.'"

"Lincoln was then 29 years old. 'We come finally to Lincoln at
